MSGPACK_V1_TYPE_WINT_DECL_HPP Hi Michael, You might be thinking of the very weird but "special" keyboard layout for phonetic input. I got a look at what you posted, and that is a quasi JIS layout based on half of the alphabet, and with Q, and a zot on the other half. I looked at that layout, and never noticed it before. It even has F, ff, Fs, FS. Since it's a unique layout, it should be easy to duplicate for ru.su. It is interesting in an historical sense. Another possibility of course is vertical QWERTY. It would be much less interesting from my point of view. Story highlights Quinton Lucas was charged with shooting his girlfriend "I do not have an explanation for this," Lucas's stepfather says (CNN) A teenager was held at gunpoint and threatened to be shot after shooting a 12-year-old girl in the leg in Indiana, police said.

Download the list of the drivers that would match your computer's problem.by BRIAN NADIG The City Council is considering placing restrictions on what types of cannabis businesses could operate in the city and on the size of retail cannabis stores. At an April 2 public safety committee meeting, police officials said they support the council's proposed changes after they shared concerns that previous license applications lacked a sufficient buffer zone around the storefront to protect bystanders. The department has also said it needs the distance between the cannabis stores and schools, parks and other institutions. "We are supportive of the buffer zoning for cannabis (businesses) to have a certain separation from schools, parks and other institutions," Chicago Police Department Commander Kevin Duffin said. "If you have a cannabis dispensary selling cannabis in the front of your business, there's no place for the public to go around that and have that illusion of safety in the area where they live and work." The proposed ordinance would allow business owners of cannabis retail stores to apply for up to 30 square feet of "buffer" space on all sides of a store, up from the current 20 square feet on both sides. The ordinance also would require "buffer" space between the cannabis storefront and schools, parks and other institutions. Another proposed ordinance amendment would allow up to 50 percent of a cannabis business license to be held by an individual or partnership of individuals who also own the property on which the cannabis dispensary is located. The ordinance also would limit the number of cannabis retail businesses in one block to one. The proposal has been met with mixed reactions from some police officials and community activists. City Council President Toni Preckwinkle, who co-sponsored the cannabis ordinance, said it will provide guidance to applicants on how to appropriately design the spaces.

"This is still a brand new industry," Preckwinkle said.
